Program Overview

Meth Diversion is an intensive 6-12 month program that closely monitors participants while they are active in community-based treatment services. Monitoring will include random drug screens, weekly face to face meetings with case managers, individual counseling sessions, group meetings & classes, and communication among the members of the Diversion Team.

The purpose of the Meth Diversion Program is to deliver a comprehensive, multi-agency, evidence-based service for adults with methamphetamine addiction. The pre-charge track is for those with pending meth charges at the time of arrest when the public safety officer may offer a treatment option instead of going to jail and the court process. The program is designed to give offenders the skills and support needed to combat their addictions and become productive members of society. Rather than focusing on prosecution and incarceration, the program's goal is to encourage treatment, sobriety, and a better quality of life and increased public safety.

Participants are required to attend group sessions, individual therapy, case review updates with the Diversion Team, make progress to sobriety, and be available for random drug testing.

Persons without criminal justice involvement outside LEAD may seek methamphetamine help at the Amador Health Center too.

Understanding Methamphetamine Addiction

Methamphetamine (meth) is a highly addictive stimulant that typically is smoked or injected.

Methamphetamine addiction typically occurs when a person begins to use it because of its powerful enhancing effects on mood and energy, weight loss and appetite suppression, among its other psychological and physical effects. Over time effectiveness decreases, and users find that they need to take higher doses to get the same results and have far greater difficulty functioning and experiencing pleasure without the drug than they did before. Many users report becoming addicted from their first use, marking its likelihood for a spiral of debilitating addiction and harmful physical and mental consequences.

The use of methamphetamine may cause mood disturbances, anxiety, confusion, paranoia, insomnia, anorexia, violent behavior, and severe dental problems.
